

RESILIENCE

Planning for What's Next

Unique Skills. Shared Purpose. A Stronger City.

Nonprofits, driven by purpose, continue to serve our cities, providing food, shelter, care and more to some of our most vulnerable neighbors.

COVID-19 has made this work more difficult, but we can create a path forward together.

Recognizing that no one player can solve these complex challenges alone, we're bringing our signature Skills for Cities model to your city. This day-long event convenes experts from across sectors to use their talents as a force for good by working alongside nonprofit professionals to build the capacity and sustainability of their organizations so they can continue to serve the community's most critical needs.

Our Skills for Cities Boston events in 2018 and 2019 provided an estimated $217,500 in pro bono services and created lasting bonds between companies, nonprofits, sectors and—ultimately—individuals invested in the wellbeing of their neighbors and their city.

Participating companies will:

Be part of the movement to help our cities plan and prepare for the next normal and adapt to an ongoing global pandemic.

Provide employees with a shared sense of purpose through skills-based volunteering, working together with local nonprofits to make our cities stronger.

Invest in local nonprofits developing solutions to a broad range of social challenges.
